What is a Spellcheck Dictionary?

A spellcheck dictionary contains a collection of terms for a specific language and may be used to verify proper grammar during the tasks for a job /project. The system provides a spellcheck dictionary for every available language.

As an example, Word has a spellcheck dictionary, which may be used to verify the spelling and grammar for a document. Much like Word, Wordbee Translator has its own spellcheck dictionaries that are used for proofreading, translation, revision, etc. based on the selected source and target languages for the task.

How are they used in the system?

The spellcheck dictionaries are used in two specific places by Wordbee Translator: Translation Editor and the QA (Quality Assurance) Tool. For example, if you have opened the file in the Translation Editor and need to verify the spelling of a specific text or all text, the configured spellcheck dictionaries for the source and target languages are used. By default every available spellcheck dictionary is enabled in the system.

The Administration Settings for spellcheck dictionaries in Wordbee Translator may be used to:

- Disable the spellcheck dictionaries for specific languages.
- Upload additional spellcheck dictionaries.
- Add terms to an existing dictionary in the system.

An Example

Let's say that your company regularly translates for English, French, German, and Dutch. If these are the only source and target languages used, then it might be feasible to disable the other spellcheck dictionaries within the system. Of course, Wordbee Translator will only use the spellcheck dictionaries that are applicable for those languages.

Another option would be to add additional terms to say the French dictionary that are common to the translations performed for your clients. These terms will then be part of the spellcheck performed when using the Translation Editor or QA Tool.
